DR. CHIKA STACY ORIUWA

One of Time magazine's "2021 Next Generational Leaders", Dr. Chika Stacy Oriuwa is an accomplished physician, spoken word poet, and advocate for racialized and marginalized populations. She is a graduate of the University of Toronto's Faculty of Medicine, where she was named valedictorian of her graduating class — the first Black woman to be recognized as sole valedictorian within the faculty.

Chika is currently a resident doctor in psychiatry at U of T, where she's aiming to complete further specialist training in neuro-psychiatry and neuro-inflammatory diseases. As a first-generation Nigerian-Canadian woman, and the only Black medical student in her cohort, Chika has become a vocal advocate for improving disparities in Black health and confronting institutional discrimination.

Chika Stacy is also a professional spoken word artist. Working under the Hamilton Youth Poets, she has earned her place as a national slam poetry finalist twice. In 2017, she released her renowned slam poem "Woman, Black" and in 2018 published her seminal article In My White Coat, I am More Black than Ever for FLARE magazine's Black History Month campaign. She has also been featured on CBC's The National, CTV News, CP24, Toronto Star, Time magazine, and TODAY, amongst others. She is slated to release her first memoir with HarperCollins in fall 2024.
