

Olympic Gold Medalist | LGBTQ+ Advocate

QUINN...

TheSpotlightAgency.com

QUINN

Olympic Gold Medalist | LGBTQ+ Advocate

At the 2020 Tokyo Olympics, Quinn made headlines as not only the first openly transgender and non-binary athlete to compete, but also the first to win an Olympic medal of any kind. As a midfielder for the Canadian women's national soccer team, Quinn helped the team earn a bronze medal at the 2016 Olympics and the historic gold medal at the 2020 Games.

Making their international debut in soccer in 2013, Quinn is a professional player for Canada's national team, and was drafted third overall in the 2018 NWSL College Draft, earning the title of highest drafted Canadian player in NWSL history.

Since then, Quinn played for OL Reign in the National Women's Soccer League (NWSL) and, in 2025, they joined Canada's first professional women's soccer league, the Northern Super League as a midfielder for the Vancouver Rise FC.

In 2020, Quinn came out publicly as transgender after being misgendered by society and the media. In doing so, Quinn became an inspirational public figure.

Quinn is a vocal advocate for the LGBTQ2+ community, especially when it comes to sports. Quinn has been involved with Athlete Ally since they were a collegiate athlete at Duke University and has worked with Duke alumni and LGBTQ2+ activists to fight anti-transgender legislation that limits or prohibits the participation of transgender athletes in sports.

Quinn also serves on the Canadian Olympic Committee Athletes Commission and helps lead the Canadian National Team Players Association.

INSTAGRAM

@thequinny5

72.6K+ Followers

Audience Demographics

27%

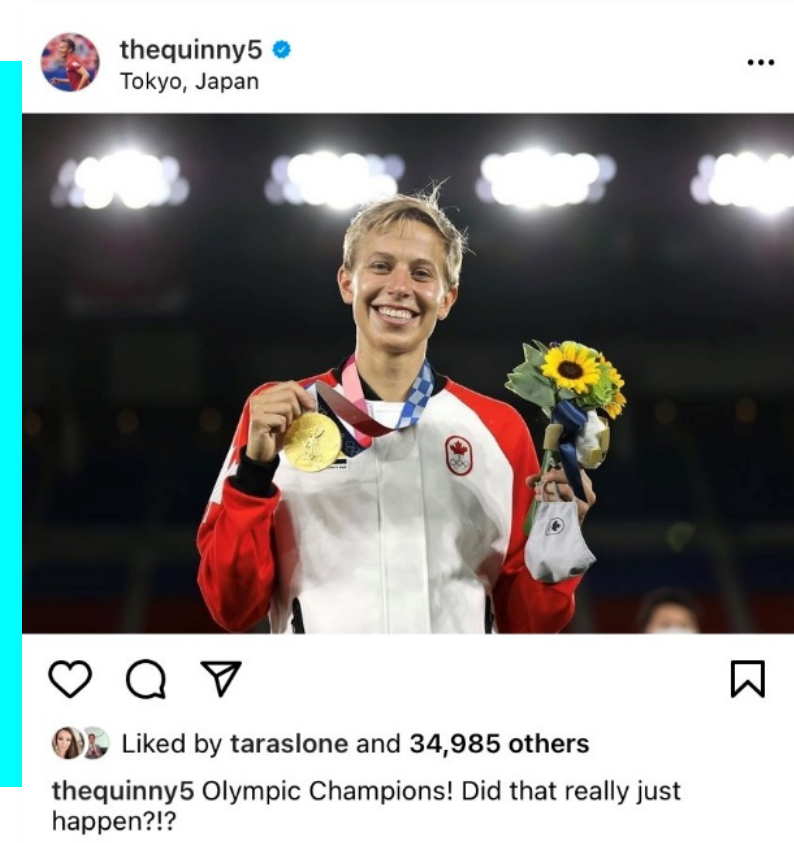

31% ages 25-29

73%

27% ages 30-34

Top Countries: Canada, USA

Quinn plays professional soccer for Canada's National Team. They earned a Bronze at the 2016 Rio Games and a Gold at the 2020 Tokyo Games. As of 2025, they also play for as a midfielder for Vancouver Rise FC.

WATCH: Are Sports a Safe Place for Trans People? Quinn Speaks Out | CBC Sports

WATCH: On Being "Visible" and Playing at the Olympics | BBC Sport

Since publicly coming out as transgender, Quinn has been a vocal advocate for the LGBTQ+ community. Alongside Athlete Ally, they've actively fought against anti-transgender legislation that limits or prohibits the participation of transgender athletes in sports.

Quinn is available to partner with brands for a variety of initiatives, including:

- Spokesperson roles
- Media appearances
- Digital video and influencer content
- Guest appearances
- and more

Past partners:

GE APPLIANCES

Casper

Partnership Opportunities ●

For more information, please contact:

info@thespotlightagency.com

thespotlightagency.com

Contact Us 